*The Script:

Nicholas Mayer was asked to write the script for ST II 12 days before shooting was to start. There were several other submissions but none that suited Paramount. Mayer did submit a script and Paramount printed a limited number for lead actors and execs. In the end the shooting script had several changes.

- 1) The title
- 2) The ending
- 3) The missing child

Mayer was unaware of these changes. All copies of the “writers” script were to believe to have been destroyed by Paramount. A few pages had been copied and some are selling a few copied pages of the writer’s script along with the shooting script in a ‘book’. But they are all photo copied. As to the ‘real’ writers script with the 1st title page, none were to believe to exist anymore. Paramount pulled the title page from Mayer’s script; it was titled “Star Trek The Motion Picture II The Undiscovered Country” Paramount changed it to “The Vengeance of Khan” along with the other changes a shooting script was written and a copy sent to ILM for the effects. George Lucas called Paramount and said unless the title is changed he would not do the effects. His next movie was called “The Vengeance of the Jedi”. Paramount gave Lucas the green light to change the title and he changed it to the “Wrath of Khan” later he changed the name of his next Star Wars movie.

Before it was over several changes were made to ST II and as mentioned all copies of the writer’s script believed to have been destroyed. The script here IS a Nicholas Mayer writer’s script. It was found in a peddler’s second hand store in central Kentucky just south of William Shatners house. (??) This is not a copy but the entire writer’s script with original title page. All pages accounted for, no copies or no shooting script pages. A 100% real shooting script of the early movies can sell for close to $1,000.00. Since this may be the last surviving intact whole Nicholas Mayer Writer’s script with “The Undiscovered County” title page and his ending I am asking a reserved $2,000.00
